BRADLEY ARGUES AFFIRMATIVELY.

Maxwell and Others Say a State Tribunal Should Decide-Bradley Claimed Goohel Law Made the Election Board a Judicial Body.

CINCINNATI, Feb. 13 .- In the United States circuit court of appeals, Judge W. H. Taft heard arguments for over three hours on the applications for injunctions against the Kentucky state board of election commissioners, and the contestants for the state offices other The plaintiffs were represented by Bradley, Willson, Sweeny and Yost, all of Kentucky. The defendants were represented by Scott, Hendrick, Hager and Maxwell, the latter being a Elember of the bar of Cincinnati and the others of Kentucky.

Ex-Governor Bradley made a plain testemater of the grant was a superior of the statement of the grant was a superior of the statement of the grant was a superior of the grant of the grant was a superior of the grant of th statement of the ground upon which the action of the court is invoked. After reciting the provisions by which the state board of elections is converted into a board of contest, he declared that they were entirely repugnant to the Republi-can form of government, which pro-vides for three distinct departments. He asserted that this board of contest had been made a judicial body by the Goebel law.

At this point Judge Taft inquired whether the Goebel law had been passed upon by the court of appeals. Governor Bradley replied that it had, but that his contention was that nevertheless, in case he could show the law to be in contravention of the federal constitution, travention of the federal constitution, then this court could be invoked. Judge Taft replied that a decision of the state court on the constitutionality of the law did not necessarily prevent jurisdiction by the United States court of appeals where a proper case could be shown.

Governor Bradley then went on to show in what respect the Gobel law deprives citizens of their rights. In this line he spoke of the situation in Kentucky with regard to these complainants having been given certificates of ants having been given certificates of election by a vote of two to one, and that one now the only member of the board which is about to pass upon the contests instituted by the candidates opposed to these plaintiffs. That one, he said, had already officially declared that the board had the power to go behind the returns, and thus to exercise judicial powers. The other two members had likewise, in advance of their decision, declared their intention to oust these plaintiffs.

Going into the argument for the jurisdiction of this court, he said that this action had its basis in the provision of the fourteenth amendment of the constitution of the United States. He quoted Justice Harlan as saying that a state may not disregard, by any of its agents, the provisions of this section by taking the provisions of this section by taking life, liberty or property without due pro-cess of law. He went on to define the meaning of liberty so as to include in it the right to vote, to have the vote counted and the officers electd permitted to ex-ercise the functions of their office.

Judge Taft here created a diversion by asking if the right to vote was granted by the fourteenth amendment to women.

Mr. Bradley admitted that while women had not the right to vote, it was nevertheless true that authorized elect-ors are entitled to protection by the federal courts against any state agent which undertakes to nullify that yote.

Lawrence Maxwell, Jr., on behalf of the defendants, made a brief argument on the two propositions that this court had no jurisdiction, because the petitions do not present a case of equity, and do not fall under the provisions of the fourteenth amendment to the United States constitution. He said the situation was one in which the position of these complainants is in course of settlement by a state tribunal. Contest pro-ceedings in their cases are pending. This condition presents none of the features of an equity case.

Mr. Maxwell then recited a number of cases in which it had been held that the court had no power to interfere in the re moval of an officer, and that courts of equity took cognizance only of civil and property rights. This being true, he claimed there was no ground whatever for federal interference. Referring to the claim under the fourteenth ameud-ment, he said the right to hold an office in the state of Kentucky was not one of the rights guaranteed by that amendment, whose offices are creations of the state of Kentucky, and the right to hold them cannot be construed into one of the rights designated in the amendment

Mr. A. E. Wilson, for the plaintiffs, followed in a brief argument, in which he took much time in reading authori-ties on the subject of the jurisdiction of a court under the fourteenth amend-ment of the United States constitution. He spoke feelingly of the gravity of the situation in Kentucky. He characterized this court as one free from the ex-eitement and partisanship that existed in Kentucky.
Mr. J. A. Scott, for the defendants, made the point that the court could not interfere to prevent the future action of the board of contest. He said the only real attack which had been made on the Goebel law was that it provided that all the election commissioners throughout the state should be partisan Deancerats. He ridiculed the idea of making this the ground of interference of this court, and insisted that the right to hold office was not one of the rights defined in the fourteenth amendment of the constitu-tion. He argued against the jurisdiction of this court.

Mr. Bradley, in his closing argument, insisted that the contest board made into a court was repugnant to the constitution of Kentucky, which specifies what courts shall be created. attempt to confer judicial authority on this board deprived these plaintiffs of their rights and gives this court jurisdic-

In reply to a question by the court, Mr. Bradley said he did claim that these offices were property. He closed by the doclaration that there was no remedy in the state courts and that equity has jurisdiction where common law fails and even where equity car: better re-dress the n ijury than can the common law.

After the conclusion of the arguments Judge Taft advised council that he would announce his decision so far as the court having jurisdiction in the cases are concerned at 2 p. m. to-morrow.

opposed to mixing the refunding of the public debt in with a bill establishing the monetary standard. He said in part: The bill undertakes too much: it not only defines and establishes the monetary standard, but sets out a scheme to fund the public debt three years before any of our bonds mature, and is order to make this scheme a trecess it provides that the instonal banks shall be the most important factors in its execution. In my judgment, the public debt should be funded without any reference whatever to the national banks. Let the scheme of funding stand on its own merits and by itself. Let the government go forward when the time comes and borrow mone, for funding purposes at as low a rate of interest as it can making such a rate set without depending on national banks or

Of course it will, and it would so continue if his section were siminated from the bill. We night as well gravely passa law providing that a yard shall continue to be three feet in length. Its re-conctment changes in no single respect existing law. The section has been the law since 1873 and is hardly worth discussing now. The provision requiring the payment of the principal and interest of the new bonds in gold
